MOUNT VERNON.

for Mount Vernon, the former home of Wash- you are to marry, and by the aid of an instruington. The fare down and back is $1.50fifty cents of which is paid to some one in otrope, guarantees to produce a life-like picture custody of the estate to keep every thing in of the future husband or wife of the applicant, good trim; and make such repairs as may be rendered necessary from time to time. The boat stops three or four hours after reaching the place, allowing visitors a nple opportunity to visit the tomb, ramble round the grounds, and inspect rooms or other objects of interest in the old family mansion. The trip down consumes one hour, and sometimes the boat reaches the wharf with great difficulty, owing to the muddy condition of the river and the insufficient depth of water. Although the general appearance of the estate is that of dilapidation and neglect, it is manifest that considerable is being done to keep it at least in presentable order. A new roadway from the boat to the house has been cut and graded, the tomb is kept in good repair, the house, surrounding dwellings, drive-ways and paths looked after, and it is every where apparent that the ladies of the country have really rescued the place from desolation and decay.-Only a portion of the dwelling is now inhabited; and the remainder, including the diningroom, hall, two parlors, and the chamber where Washington died, are thrown open to strangers for inspection.

of several members of the Washington family. The old tomb, spring, garden and park, remain very much the same as they were, except that hundreds of thousands of scribbling visitors have adorned palings, beams, trees, and even stones, with their names, in the vain hope of temporary notice and remembrance. The By its direct action on the cuticle it draws from temporary notice and remembrance. The by its direct action on the cuticle it draws from the chamber in which Washington died used to have a fac simile of the bed he occupied; but and leaving the surface as nature intended it.

By its direct action on the cuticle it draws from and well deserving its name—the Lilly, the Palmetto and others.

WEALTH IN THE GREAT DISMAL. Since the time when Col. Byrd made his survey of the dividing line between Virginia and North Carolina, of which he gives so graphic a description, the shingle and lumber getters have been more or less at work in the great Dismal Swamp, engaged in the conversion of the juniper and the cypress and other timber, in which that prolific region once the Psychomotrope, guarantees to produce a perfect and life-like picture of the future husband or wife of the applicant, with date of martimber, in which that prolific region once abounded, into gold or greenbacks. Since the conclusion of the war, these lumber getters and swamp men have resumed their work, though under crippled circumstances. They want capital to enlarge their operations.

There is now a very large number of juniper and cypress logs cut in this swamp. These logs are placed on board northern vessels on the canal, or transported to Norfolk by lighters and hence shipped North-and returned to us in the shape of wooden ware of every description, with which the wants of the Southern people have been and are supplied.

We know of one gentleman engaged in this business who furnishes to one firm in Baltimore, timber of this description or similar, to the amount of twenty five thousand dollars, and we have no doubt the business amounts to from seventy-five thousand to one hundred thousand dollars in the course of a year.

The swamp is about twelve miles broad from the canal, more or less, and though much has been cut from it, it still abounds in cypress and other timber.

Now, why cannot some enterprising men of capital erect factories on the line of the canal, in the very midet of the material and make wooden ware and broom handles to supply the Southern country? The factories at the North do it from the same material and grow rich. We likewise send them from the swamp and its vicinity, material out of which carriages, buggies and other vehicles are manu factured and returned to the South .- Norfolk

NEWSPAPERS. - A paper lives by the advertising which it does. The subscription and sale of papers hardly pay for the paper used in printing, and when a man asks for a notice of any matter by which he expects to be benefitted, he is asking for so much money out of the pockets of the proprietors. It would be just as reasonable for him to go into a store and ask the merchant for a suit of clothes or a bag any time to supply any one who may call on of coffee. And yet he would open his eyes in him. astonishment at such a request.
